LISTEN TO THE SOUND OF THE EARTH TURNING,

SPRING 1963 -YOKO ONO

This collection was guided by purpose, particularly a Japanese concept called “Ikigai”. The overlap between our highest personal and collective needs are pockets of meaning, like our passion or mission in life. And at the heart of where everything necessary overlaps is Ikigai - our “reason for being” – the most potent source of value in our lives.

An appreciation and recognition of artistry and luxury All That Remains pieces are known for, with a sense of elevated elegance. The heightened yet effortless assurance of her or himself [Them] in a deeply connected way. We dive deeper into an offering of unisex transformative pieces and expand to a higher offering of evening wear.

Japanese-inspired floral appliqué on raw silks in noir , hand worked crochets in parchments and taupe with monochrome noir & white . Natural tones of cream in opulent silks with heavenly ribbon embroidery and freshwater pearls against gold. Contrast tones played off with marbled apricot , chives and creams, and a fiery deep rich red.

As always, a sincere sense of history and nostalgia, a balance between strength and delicacy, feminine and masculine.

This collection is about refinement. Establishing partnerships with incredible artisans in India has allowed a deeper dive into exquisite ribbon embroidery, artful rope work, old-world hand looming and labyrinthine beading. In the spirit of Ikigai, it's a quiet and intentional reinvention of the All That Remains wardrobe. It's softly inviting; it's elegant and balanced.
